Preview of AnyFont 1.0

By ryan | February 27, 2010

I have spent the last couple of weekends working on version 1.0 of AnyFont, which I was initially planning on releasing this weekend. I have decided to rather hold off releasing it until next weekend though to allow some more time for testing.

For those who cant wait though, read on to see the list of new features, some screenshots and to download the beta release.

Using AnyFont for your menu text

By ryan | January 16, 2010

How can I use AnyFont to change my menu text in WordPress?

This must be the most frequently asked question I get about AnyFont. It was always my plan to automate this feature in AnyFont with a simple on/off switch, but due to serious time constraints over the past year and the way the filters work for the function `wp_list_pages`, I have not yet been able to nail it. But until I do, here is a quick solution which allows you to create a customized menu that uses AnyFont styles.

Getting Started with AnyFont

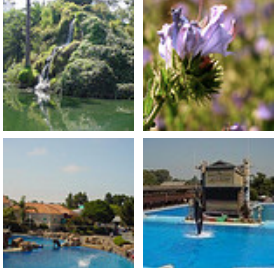

By ryan | May 30, 2009

Recently there have been quite a few requests for some sort of help document or howto for using AnyFont, and I haven't really done much documentation for AnyFont due to time constraints. So I have put together this short howto which will cover the basic operations of AnyFont until I am able to find some time to write the next howto doc, which will cover some of the more advanced tips and tricks for AnyFont as well as how to manage the advanced options effectively.
